Overseas Expert Column by Alastair Middleton

Japan has had great success at this meeting in the past and it can continue here with CHIKAPPA. A two-time Listed winner at home, he had a hard time in Saudi Arabia earlier this year but a 4th place in the G3 Cluster Cup at Morioka on August 11th suggests that he is coming back into form and he can be peaking here. Yutaka Take's presence aboard seems sure to make him the market favourite and while the draw is not ideal, it's not insurmountable.

VINCERO CAVALLO headlines the home challenge. He pulled off a sweep of all three legs of the Sprint Series this Spring to confirm himself as Korea's top sprinter winning from both close to the pace and from a long way back. He hasn't raced since May, but he went through two trials in August looking very well, and at his best, he can compete for the win.

SUNRISE HAWK and TAGANO BEAUTY are the other Japanese visitors and both should be in the mix. Both are three-time Listed winners in Japan.

Among other locals who can make an impact, DESPITE WIN is an up and comer with plenty of scope for more progress while BLACK MUSK, running in his fourth Korea Sprint, was a very good class 1 winner at the end of July.

SUPER FINISH likes to lead and he can go forward from his wide draw. MIGHTY NEO has early speed and he can get into the trail. SELF IMPROVEMENT will be positive. CARDINAL FORCE has drawn awkwardly and may be trapped wide. CHIKAPPA should look for some cover.

An up and coming three-year-old who won four times and never been outside the top five. Mighty Neo was a smart winner at this distance at class 2 level before running 5th at class 1 over a mile in early August, his best performances have come from on the pace. This is a tough assignment against harder opposition than he has faced before, but he can be competitive.

A breakout 6th in this race last year, he has since established himself as Korea's best sprinter with a sweep of all three legs of the Sprint Series this spring. He missed a scheduled prep race at the end of July, so he is first-up, but he went through two trials in August so should be fit. Tactically versatile, at his best, he is a winning chance.

A stablemate of Vincero Cavallo, he gets his chance having won two of his last three at class 2 level, all at today's distance and most recently on 3 August when he came from a long way back. Untried against this level of opposition but he benefits from the services of Ruan Maia aboard.

A rare Hong Kong All-Weather track specialist, the six-year-old was a two-time winner during the 2024/2025 season, both at 1200m. His wins have come when he has raced on or close to the pace and if he takes to the sand track and gets a good start, then he can give a strong account of himself at probable big odds.

He ran a super 2nd to Vincero Cavallo in the KOR G3 Busan Ilbo Sprint at this distance in March but has struggled to recapture that form in three subsequent starts, all at Korean Group race level. He has a smart finish and will be running on, but that recent form doesn't inspire much confidence.

It's fair to say he doesn't win out of turn and that he isn't a winning chance here, but he rarely runs a bad race and was most recently 3rd over this distance at class 2 level on 1 August. He likes to race on pace or handy, but he is yet to run the kind of time that will be necessary to compete here. Outsider.

The veteran eight-year-old rounded off last season with victory in the JPN G1 JBC Sprint at NAR-Saga and has in the past been placed at G3 level on the JRA. Remarkably in a career spanning forty-two races and stretching back to 2019, he has never raced at less than 1400m, but the ability to stay further than the 1200m can be a big plus for sprinters on the often-gruelling Seoul sand.

Won the JPN G3 Hokkaido Sprint Cup and JPN G2 Tokyo Hai last year and he kicked off his four-year-old season with a trip to Saudi Arabia for the G2 Riyadh Dirt Sprint. While he had a hard time there, he showed a return to form when 4th in the JPN G3 Cluster Cup on 11 August and could be peaking in Seoul. A big run is expected, and Yutaka Take, who won the race on Graceful Leap in 2017, rides. Widest gate, but the favourite.
